ON THE BRINK: Tony Blair

Families go to war on Blair

■ TONY Blair's decision to invade Iraq will be challenged again tomorrow when families of dead soldiers step up their fight. Two groups will tell High Court judges there should be a public inquiry into the PM's decisions. And they're confident of success after Britain's most senior soldier, Sir Richard Dannatt, criticised the war, saying we "kicked the door in". They also believe last week's close Commons vote turning down a call for an inquiry fuels their case.

■ by NEIL CHANDLER

■ It is being brought by Beverley Clarke, mum of Trooper David Clarke, 19, from Littleworth, Staffs, and Rose Gentle, mum of Fusilier Gordon Gentle, 19, from Glasgow.

Solicitor for the families Phil Shiner said: "We are 100% certain there is no defence to our legal case." Andrew Burgin, of Military Families Against the War, said: "One of the things the judges must decide is whether a review would be in the public interest."

"As 70% of people want an inquiry, it's hard to think of anything more in the public interest."

■ If Master of the Rolls Sir Anthony Clarke, Sir Igor Judge and Lord Justice Dyson agree, a public inquiry will hurry Mr Blair out of 10 Downing Street.

KNOT LONG NOW Saddam's D-Day

IRAQ is on red alert today as the death sentence is expected to be announced on Saddam Hussein.

The former dictator is set to be convicted over the slaughter of 148 villagers and most observers believe he will be sentenced to hang.

But there are widespread fears that Iraq will then go up in flames.

Saddam, 69, is accused of killing the Shia villagers of al-Dujail after he escaped an assassination attempt there in 1982.

He is also being tried for a second sickening crime – the massacre of 180,000 Iraqi Kurds.

Sadly, Iraq will erupt whatever happens.

Observers say his Sunni supporters will start killing Shias if their former leader is sentenced to death, especially in the Sunni strongholds of Fallujah and Ramadi.

One of Saddam's legal team said a death sentence will "open the gates of hell" for British and

■ by NEIL CHANDLER

American troops in the country. But Iraqi Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki still hopes Saddam "gets what he deserves".

He said: "The sentence will be given tomorrow, God willing, and our wish is that the sentence will be what this man deserves, for what he did to Iraqi people."

"We call on all the Iraqi people for calm."

Gallows

The trial has lurched between tragedy and farce. Lawyers on both sides have been killed and two judges were sacked for being "too polite" to Saddam.

If he dodges the gallows, the Shias now in power who were persecuted under Saddam will be furious.

Either way, it is feared that Shias and Sunnis will be killing each other in even greater numbers than the 87 tortured bodies found in Baghdad on Thursday and Friday.

Today the whole country will be locked down with a 24-hour curfew.

■ SET FOR THE NOOSE: Saddam is facing death by hanging if he is found guilty. The violence everyone fears was underlined by a car bomb in Baghdad yesterday, inset

Euro pot hits £100m

■ ONE of the biggest-ever lottery jackpots will be up for grabs this week after the EuroMillions draw rolled over for a tenth week – topping £100million.

Despite a frenzy of last-minute ticket buying, no players scooped Friday's £88million jackpot. The biggest jackpot was £125million in February after 11 rollovers.

A single winner would easily top Irish lass Dolores McNamara, who won the draw's biggest prize last July by scooping £79million. The top prize hasn't been won since August 25 during which the rollover series has generated £25million for good causes.

PROTEST: KT Tunstall

A WARM FRONT...

ABOUT 22,500 protesters gathered in London's Trafalgar Square yesterday calling for urgent action on climate change.

Singer KT Tunstall, actress Miranda Richardson, Never Mind the Buzzcocks host Simon Amstell and rock group Razorlight were among the celebrities lending support.

The event, organised by the Stop Climate Chaos Coalition, coincided with the eve of global talks in Kenya.

Activists want the Government to negotiate an international deal aimed at limiting global warming to less than two degrees centigrade.

They also demand a carbon emissions Bill for Britain.

CYBER-BABE BOWLS OVER SCI-FI FANS

SILVER JUBILEE: Caroline as fans of Torchwood will see her tonight, left, and looking stunning out of her sexy cyberwoman outfit

TORCHWOOD babe Caroline Chikezie became the world's first-ever cyberwoman after bowling over the show's writer. Cutie Caroline appeared totting a gun in sci-fi flick Aeon Flux with Charlize Theron. But despite the film being a flop, Caroline, 28, won the eye of Torchwood and Dr Who writer Russell T Davies. And, after seeing the way she handled a laser gun in the £50million flick, the Welshman decided she was his first choice for the role.

Now the babe is threatening to scatter Torchwood leader Captain Jack and his pals like pins in tonight's episode.

by MICHAEL BOOKER

A source on the new BBC drama explained: "Russell immerses himself in every bit of TV and film sci-fi he can. He didn't think too much of Aeon Flux but he liked the way Caroline handled a gun.

"Russell thought it was a long shot that she'd agree to be in Torchwood because she is getting a name in Hollywood. But she was dead keen on taking part – and donning the sexy silver suit. She loved it."

Torchwood viewers can see Caroline, who played physio Elaine Hardy in Footballers' Wives, star as cyberwoman Lisa in tonight's episode of the Dr Who spin-off at 10pm on BBC3.

Boy in arson probe

A BOY of 14 was still being quizzed by detectives last night over a suspected arson attack on a house that left a teenager dead and five members of a family in hospital.

The body has still to be formally identified but police believe it is that of a 15-year-old boy.

A post-mortem examination showed he died from smoke inhalation.

Burns

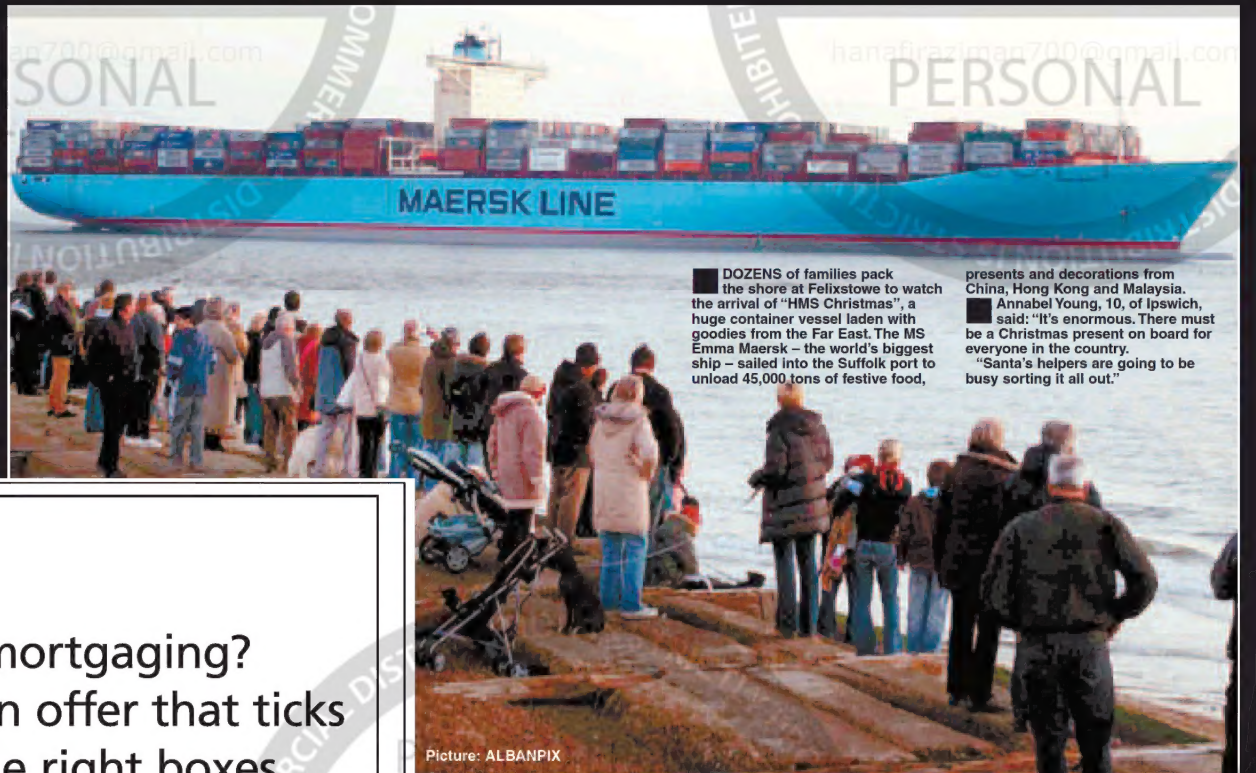

The boy was arrested following the blaze at the house in Barnsley, South Yorkshire, which started early on Friday.

South Yorkshire Police said it was being treated as suspected arson and forensic tests were being carried out while officers made house-to-house inquiries.

A 44-year-old woman, a 12-year-old girl and two men, aged 20 and 23, are still in hospital where they are being treated for various burns and smoke inhalation.

A woman of 18 was released from hospital yesterday after treatment.

ON-LINE

DOZENS of families pack the shore at Felixstowe to watch the arrival of "HMS Christmas", a huge container vessel laden with goodies from the Far East. The MS Emma Maersk – the world's biggest ship – sailed into the Suffolk port to unload 45,000 tons of festive food, presents and decorations from China, Hong Kong and Malaysia. Annabel Young, 10, of Ipswich, said: "It's enormous. There must be a Christmas present on board for everyone in the country. "Santa's helpers are going to be busy sorting it all out."

£4m an hour on net gifts

CHRISTMAS is dot-coming – with Brits splashing out a staggering £4million every hour on presents online.

And a whopping £7billion in total is expected to be spent on the web in the run-up to December 25.

With just 50 days to go until the big day, the five crackers from Girls Aloud helped launch the festive spending spree yesterday – but not with a mouse.

The babes – Cheryl Cole, 23, Nicola Roberts, 21, Sarah Harding, 24, Kimberley Walsh, 24, and Nadine Coyle, 21, – were at Knightsbridge department store Harrods for its annual Christmas parade.

The girls arrived in two Cadillac convertibles, closely followed by Father Christmas in a horse-drawn carriage.

Newlywed Cheryl told him she doesn't want any presents herself – because she has everything she needs.

And she revealed she'll be celebrating without Chelsea and England star hubby Ashley this Christmas.

The Georgie babe said: "I won't be seeing Ashley over Christmas as I'll be with my family in Newcastle.

"It's always like that as he's very busy with his football over the Christmas period.

"I won't even see him at New Year. "If Ashley gets me a present I'll be really cross. I've got everything I need. The only thing I wanted was a No.1 album and we've got that already.

by REBECCA VARLEY

"Christmas is for the kids. I enjoy going back to see my nieces and nephews and giving them presents."

And she revealed: "The best Christmas present I ever got was a real sweet shop with a till, money and proper stuff. I would sit there for hours playing with it."

"I guess I'll be happy if Ashley gets me a packet of Haribo sweets for Christmas!" she joked.

Leggy Nadine will be spending the holiday with her Desperate Housewives boyfriend Jesse Metcalfe.

Single

"Jesse is going to come over and visit me in Ireland," she said.

"My parents really like him. And he gets on really well with my sister's boyfriend."

Quashing speculation that the band is about to split, she declared: "It's not true at all – we have a tour planned for next May and the album's number one, so why would we split up?"

Afterwards, the girls performed songs Biology, Love Machine, a cover version of I'll Stand By You and their latest single Something Kinda Oooh in front of a crowd of 150 children and their parents.

Cheryl may not be compiling a Christmas list this year but the festive period is still set to see a shopping boom, with total spending across Christmas in the UK expected to hit £75billion.

And a predicted £7billion of that will be spent on the internet – a 40% rise on the same period last year.

James Roper, chief executive of Interactive Media in Retail Group (IMRG) said: "The internet has become the most reliable way to shop.

"Leading stores like John Lewis, Comet and Littlewoods – many of the top brands – have been trading online for a while but now there are more sophisticated, larger ranges.

"Millions of people have been shopping online for six years – they're now familiar with it and they trust it.

"And broadband – which is now installed in half of homes in our large cities – has made online shopping much more accessible.

"The whole industry has just grown up and the supply is massively better than it ever was before."

Mr Roper said the biggest growth area in internet shopping appeared to be in clothes – thanks in part to the quality of images available on websites.

But top online buys this Christmas are expected to be electrical goods.

Flatscreen TVs, satellite navigation kits and the Nintendo Wii and Xbox 360 video game consoles are all being tipped to fly off website shelves faster than Santa's elves can stock up his sack.

CANCER SCARE: Jade

Family in fury at Jade

THE family of Jade Goody are furious with her after it emerged she checked out of hospital against medical advice.

The ex-Big Brother babe is facing an anxious three-week wait to find out if she has bowel cancer.

She underwent tests after collapsing at home with crippling stomach pains.

But she discharged herself from Princess Alexandra Hospital on Wednesday despite medics telling her she was too ill.

Desperate

An insider at the medical centre in Harlow, Essex, said: "She was having to have a lot of morphine."

"She was desperate to get home to her children but doctors told her she must not leave until they felt she was well enough. But she insisted."

Her mum Jackie, 48, said: "I was furious with her when she discharged herself but being a mum I've come to accept why she did it - she just wants to be with her children."

Jade, 25, spent yesterday at home with boyfriend Jack Tweed, 19, and her children Bobby Jack, three, and Freddie, two.

■ TWO saucy lap-dancers who tried to find out if Ben Mills had the XXX Factor were left gutted when the rocker turned them down.

The 26-year-old was walking past London's famous Stringfellows last week when two beauties pounced on him offering him a private dance.

■ But Ben, who has admitted taking cocaine in the past, was so scared of a backlash from show bosses over an encounter with club dancers, he gave them the cold shoulder.

Ben was also thrown out of a showbiz bash – held for mentor Sharon Osbourne – by X Factor heavies desperate to keep him out of the spotlight until last night's live performance.

■ Ben reckons his success has a lot to do with Sharon who has taken him under her wing – much to fellow wannabes' hatred.

He added: "Sharon's doing a great job – looking after me too well in fact. She keeps trying to kidnap me."

Stalking fans follow stars

by MARK JEFFERIES

HUNKY hopefuls Ray Quinn and Ashley McKenzie are being stalked by fans.

TV bosses had to step up security before last night's Abba-themed special because followers found out where the singers are staying.

In the past week fans have:

● TRIED to break into the £5million house where the acts are living in a bid to get their hands on the lads.

● PUSHED X-rated photos of themselves through the letterbox, along with notes begging for sex.

● CAMPED outside the property 24 hours a day.

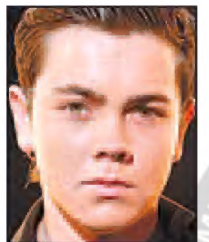

● FOLLOWED the stars to and from rehearsals.

Last night one insider said: "Some fans discovered where the stars are living and are taking it a bit too far."

"It's causing real worries for everyone involved and it's pretty hairy – especially for Ray and Ash. The level of interest has never been so high – it's quite frightening."

Security chiefs have become so worried they have dispatched decoy cars to keep fans off the contestants' trail.

They took action after a group of female fans trailed the singers' cars from

GIRLS' FAVOURITE: Ray

Wembley in north London to nearby Hampstead, where the X Factor house is located.

And they made it clear they are lusting after Ashley, 20, and Ray, 18, in particular.

Ousted Dionne Mitchell, 26, who was axed on Saturday night, said:

"It's gotten a bit mental. Some of the fans tried to get into the X Factor house."

And pal Kerry McGregor, who was also voted off the show, added: "Whenever the boys leave they're chased by these girls."

"The boys are literally mobbed."

"The fans are out there all the time. You can hear them shouting the boys' names."

"And they've even been posting pictures of themselves through the letterbox."

A show source said: "The safety and welfare of our contestants is paramount."

Leona's lonely...

■ BABE Leona Lewis was in tears yesterday after she received a video message from her boyfriend telling her to come home – but not too soon. The stunning singer, 21, has been going out with electrician Lou for four years. She's been holed up in the X Factor house for weeks away from her man. And her emotions spilled over when he spoke to her via the video.

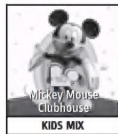

A show source said: "Lou and Leona's family sent her a message telling her she had done really well to get this far. Lou admitted he wanted her to come home and was missing her like crazy."

"But he also said she didn't have to come back 'too soon' because he wants her to go further on the show."

"The video made Leona cry and now she is missing Lou even more."

WEARING A BIT THIN: Anthony looked gaunt at the X Factor Boot Camp

AFTER

ROAD HOG: The teenage singer has been piling on the pounds

Ant's Eton all the pies

ETON Road star Anthony Hannah is piling on the pounds following a health scare over his dramatic weight loss.

The camp singer looked gaunt at the start of Boot Camp in October and pals feared the pressure of the show had got to him.

His ex-drama teacher Maxine Ellis at Liverpool Theatre School feared his weight had dropped in a similar way to when he was a troubled youngster.

She said: "When I saw Anthony

by DOMINIK LEMANSKI

on the show when the band were taken to Ireland, I was horrified at his appearance - he looked far too thin."

Maxine said she thought the 17-year-old's appearance was the result of secret heartache.

Anthony, part of the four-piece which is among the remaining finalists, was abandoned by his mother as a child and was cared for by his gran Hettie Hannah, now 71, along with his brother and three sisters.

And the unstable family set-up affected his confidence at school.

Weight

Maxine said: "Anthony was a popular boy here and was always surrounded by girls."

"But he only ever wanted to be friends with them. He started dyeing his hair and becoming more adventurous in his choice of clothes. He blossomed in a short space of time here but I think his dramatic weight loss was down to a confusion over who he was."

"It began to stress him out and that showed in his weight."

Thankfully Anthony has begun to put weight back on while staying in the X Factor house.

Maxine added: "I've been relieved to see him looking much healthier on the last couple of shows."

SIMON'S GOT AN XMAS HIT

CHEEKY Simon Cowell has already chosen the X Factor song he believes will be Christmas No. 1...but he hasn't told the other judges what it is.

In an exclusive interview with the Daily Star Sunday, he bragged that the single would be a guaranteed "smash". But he could have upset Louis Walsh and Sharon Osbourne by not confiding in them, even though one of their acts could be singing it!

The single will be released by the winner. Cowell, 47, said: "Yes, I have chosen the song."

Ballad

"It's a big ballad I have used on a show before but not in this country."

"The song is a smash. It will definitely be the Christmas No. 1."

When we told Louis, 54, he looked puzzled and said: "I'm only interested in the Christmas single if it is Eton Road."

Then he joked: "If it is a big ballad and Simon has chosen it, it will probably be Unchained Melody!" A show source said: "It's strange Simon still has control over the choice. It just shows who wears the trousers."

"Even if an act of his doesn't win you can be certain that the song is going to be a hit."

STAGG: MY NEW LOVE

SO HAPPY TOGETHER: Colin Stagg with Teri, the woman he says is the love of his life

Picture: RAY LEVINE

CLEARED murder suspect Colin Stagg has finally found happiness in the arms of a mum-of-four.

Stagg, 43, has struggled to find love since being accused of killing model Rachel Nickell on Wimbledon Common in 1992.

Yesterday it was revealed that a convicted sex killer in Broadmoor is to be charged with her murder after Crown Prosecution lawyers decided there was sufficient evidence.

And now Stagg is ready to start a new life with his "soulmate".

Teri Marthant, 41, was once the teenage girlfriend of his elder brother. But after a six-month courtship, she and Stagg are contemplating marriage and a new family.

At his council flat in Roehampton, West London, Stagg said: "Until I met Teri again my life was in the toilet."

"Even the Job Centre has admitted I am unemployed because of who I am."

"After a disastrous short-lived marriage and a few affairs with nutters who wanted the publicity, I despaired of ever finding true love."

"Then Teri contacted me and I got my life back."

"We have taken our time getting to know each other and I can say hand on

by TED HYNDS

heart she is my soulmate. It helped that she had known me in her teens when she was courted by my brother Tony."

He added: "She moved away and eventually went to the States, returning two years ago."

"She wrote me a lovely letter and we started messaging on the internet and chatting on the phone."

"Finally after three months she came up to stay for a couple of days."

Lucky

"It was amazing. It felt as if we had always known each other – which in a way we had."

"My big concern was meeting her family – but things couldn't have been easier. She only has her 14-year-old daughter and four-year-old son still living with her and they have made me so welcome."

"We have talked about marriage and even the prospect of having a child of our own."

Teri, 41, of Farnham, Surrey, cuddled him and said: "I can't believe how lucky I am. This is the real thing."

"We are trying to keep our feet on the ground but it's hard to stay sensible when you always have a smile on your face. We were made for each other."

Have your crown, I've got Teddy

by EMMA SHANKLAND

FORMER Miss Great Britain Danielle Lloyd last night revealed she keeps her crown in a Quality Street tin in her wardrobe.

The sexy star, 22, was stripped of the title last week despite denying claims she had been secretly dating footballer Teddy Sheringham – a judge at the contest – before he voted for her to win.

But Miss GB chiefs say she is refusing to give back the glittering crystal crown she won in February.

Now curvy Danielle has challenged organisers to collect it themselves.

She said: "I never refused to give it back but they haven't sent anyone to get it yet."

"They can have it with pleasure. I only wore it the once and I keep it in an old Quality Street tin in my wardrobe."

Danielle lost her Miss GB title when it emerged she had given an interview appearing to say West Ham star Teddy, 40, had given her a £10,000 pair of Jimmy Choo shoes last Christmas – two months before he helped crown her.

Danielle added: "I'm sick of hearing about this crown. It's probably only worth a couple of hundred quid and I never even got it out."

"People must think I'm just sitting here in the nude with just my Miss GB crown and my Jimmy Choos on and eating Quality Street."

"The Miss GB organisers know they can have the crown back. I enjoyed my time but the best thing I ever got was meeting Teddy at the contest – that's the one thing they cannot take away from me."

SPLIT: Paul and Heather inset

by ANDY LEA

My Heart) at the Royal Albert Hall on Friday.

He said: "I think a relationship with a partner is intensely personal and I prefer to keep it that way."

"When you are going through difficulties, the thing to do for the sake of all concerned is to keep a certain dignity and remember that it is a private affair."

"That way you'll probably get through it better. You will put less noses out of joint and I think it is a more dignified way to go about it – so that's what I try to do."

"Life goes on. I do not hold grudges against anyone. I don't blame anyone for the sadnesses that have happened to me."

"I am sad about them because it would be stupid to be otherwise." The couple made headlines across the world when divorce papers claiming he mistreated Heather were leaked to the media.

They alleged Sir Paul, who is worth £825million, pushed Heather, 38, into a bath while she was pregnant, tried to choke her and once lunged at her with a broken glass.

Through his lawyers, Paul said he will "vigorously" defend himself.

Sadness

Sir Paul added: "I have had a lot of sadness happen in my life but I have always been optimistic. I have always found something good will happen."

He began composing the classic album more than eight years ago, before first wife Linda died of breast cancer, but stopped work due to his grief.

He told the audience: "This has been such a long labour of love."

Stock it to 'em

INTRODUCED by this Government in 1999, they've been as much use as nipples on a bloke - in fact they've probably ended up doing society harm. I'm talking, of course, about ASBOs. And we learned last week that, to a lot of scummy teenagers, they're now a badge of honour - a "street diploma" according to the Youth Justice Board.

Still, the prisons are full, the probation services are over-stretched and most magistrates are more worried about protecting human rights, so what can be done?

One council is at least trying to tame the thugs. In Bridlington they're putting up mug shots of ASBO Arseholes on a giant noticeboard, plus advice on what people should do if they see any of 'em up to no good.

JUST one question for all those magistrates about the questions being asked in the new census: What exactly have you got to hide?

It's a start but it's not enough. Guess what - I've got a suggestion. Two, in fact.

First off, felt tip pens. Every male who's been ASBOed has to have "Wker" written in capitals on their forehead. In indelible marker.

Women would be branded with either "Slapper" or "Chav Tart". Oh, and the victims of their anti-social actions would get to write it on them in the middle of the town's shopping mall, as well as topping it up once a week.

If they can prove they're in gainful employment (a long shot, I know) then they only have to take the shame at weekends. Because that's the important thing - being ashamed.

For decent people, a court appearance and a criminal record is a nightmare. For some of these scum it's a badge of honour, which leads me to my second modest proposal.

The stocks. Instead of an ASBO, or the equally useless community service orders, the courts should be able to sentence these morons to a couple of hundred hours in the stocks.

Community Support officers would be on hand to issue buckets of rotten vegetables mixed in with past-their-sell-by date fillets of fish.

The yobboes in the stocks would be offered waterproof Burberry boiler suits but would have to serve their sentence in two-hour chunks with no loo or fag breaks.

They would also have to do some of their sentence outside the school they played truant from.

Oh, and each stock would have its own roving webcam, which you could visit on www.chavscumgettingtheircomeuppance.com - complete with details of exactly what they did. Whaddya reckon?

NEWSNIGHT munter Kirsty Wark gave Madonna an all-over licking rather than a kicking last week, nodding and cooing like a Caledonian crawler to everything the sad old slapper had to say.

She didn't even challenge Madge's sick attempt at playing the race card when Granny Ritchie said: "I have people say to me when I walk down the street, 'Why did you adopt a black child?' - there is a lot of racism in the world."

Wark should have asked when that happened last - Madonna walking down the street that is, not the supposedly racist comment - and then quizzed her as to how many people had said it, where, and what Madonna barked back. Instead of just mewling in sympathy.

Then there are the reports that she wants to add another child to her and gormless Guy's "rainbow" of a family. Isn't even saying you might choose a kid because of its colour the teeniest, tiniest bit racist?

COLOUR ISSUE: Newsnight's Kirsty Wark with Madonna after the TV interview

DUNC, YOU'RE A DOUGHNUT

IS it just me or does anyone else find balding Jock businessman Duncan Bannatyne a toe-curlingly creepy ft?

He's got a mouth like a cat's arse, a comb-over Sir Bobby Charlton would envy and ears like Mr Spock. Even his stooped surname's irritating.

Bonehead-tyne popped up on LIVINGtv last week offering some low-rent regional manager's job in his leisure centre empire (the words "big" and "deal" spring to mind).

Three sad wannabes humiliated themselves in a bid to win but the doughnut that is Duncan looked more tragic and desperate than all of them put together.

I do my fair share of dodgy TV but I've got kids and ex-wives to support. And a mortgage. And a dog. Oh, and the Stella Artois brewery. This armpit's a multi-millionaire, so the only possible reason he is stinking up our screens must be because he has an ego the size of his bank balance. Sadly he's exceeded his overdraft limit when it comes to charm and charisma.

My BIG rival Jen ...by loser Anya

THE catwalk claws came out yesterday as Make Me a Supermodel cast-off Anya James dismissed her arch-rival as "too big". Slender Anya, 19, was booted out of the telly contest on Friday after losing to size 12 Jen Hunter, 24, from Wigan.

Londoner Anya said: "I think I may have been a regional thing. Jen would have got the northern vote."

She could do more exercise. Because she's a bit bigger, she has to watch it more.

"She's probably too big for high fashion but she'd be a really good commercial model."

See the show on Channel 5 at 8pm on Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday and on Friday at 8.30pm. The finale is on November 16 at 8.30pm.

FOR REALITY TELLY

IT'S GOING TO BE HOT

Ticking-off for jungle celebs

by MARK JEFFERIES

THIS year's I'm A Celebrity Get Me Out Of Here! stars face scorching 100 degree temperatures on the hottest series ever.

And the celebs will also face a plague of dangerous creepy crawlies that is heading their way.

The good news about the three-week series, which kicks off on November 13, is that sexy celebs like Myleene Klass and Matt Willis will be stripping off as fast as they can to try to keep cool.

The bad news is that they'll have to contend with loads of ticks – which can temporarily paralyse you.

Next week, temperatures in Oz will rise to 40 Celsius – 104F – making it almost unbearable in the outback. A show insider said: "The contestants will be down to their bikinis and shorts, so it will be great for fans to see them."

"The one major problem is the enormous number of insects currently roaming around the camp area. The heat is a perfect breeding ground for ticks, bugs and flies. And it is essential that everyone keeps their hats on at all times as ticks fall out of trees and can paralyse your face.

"It's definitely going to be over 100 degrees – hotter than it's ever been on the show before – and there's no sign of the rain which usually keeps things cooler in the camp."

Serious

Myleene, 28, and Busted star Matt, 23, are expected to be joined by funny girl Faith Brown, 58; celebrity fashion designer Scott Henshall, 29; ex-Emerdale actress Malandra Burrows, 40; model Paula Hamilton, 48; Cherie Blair's half-sister Lauren Booth, 39; ex-Corrie actor Chris Quinen, 48; and ex-BBC news reader Jan Leeming, 63.

Others in the mix are David Hasselhoff, 54, American producer David Gest, 53, and 40-year-old former TV presenter John Leslie.

The jungle bugs have struck before on the show, with serious consequences. In 2004, winner Joe Pasquale was almost left paralysed by a tick that had to be ripped off his chest.

Joe told Paul Burrell: "Apparently it was a paralysis tick. So it's already dropped the poison in. It's been in there about an hour."

"I've already got a headache so I asked, 'What are the signs?' and the medic said you get a headache, stiffness in the joints, stiffness around the groin and you feel really, really tired."

"But he said we got it out early enough – so he says I won't end up paralysed."

SIZZLER: Myleene will have to strip to beat heat

SEXY OUTFITS: Louisa

A leg up for Louisa

STRICTLY Come Dancing babe Louisa Lytton hopes to stay on the show until the final – because it's giving her perfect pins.

The EastEnders star, who plays dead gangster Johnny Allen's daughter Ruby, loves what the show is doing for her body.

Louisa, 17, who leaves the BBC1 soap shortly, said: "I haven't lost weight but I have toned up – particularly my legs. 'And I love the sexy outfits. I prefer the Latin ones to the ballroom dresses.'"

Louisa – 'bookies' choice to win the show at 2-1 – admitted she was going through the pain barrier.

She said: "It has been hard physically. My neck muscles have been killing me from holding the ballroom poses."

"The show's totally different to what I'm used to. The adrenalin gets me through the dance and it's a big relief when it's all over."

Her dance partner Vincent Simone talked her through panic attacks in rehearsals.

Louisa said: "He looks after me. We'll stay in touch after the show. He's like my big brother!"

JORDAN has urged I'm A Celebrity... bosses to make the Bushucker Trials harder – so that this year's famous faces suffer in the Aussie outback.

The stunning model, 28, will be covering the reality show for ITV's This Morning having met her husband Peter Andre, 33, while she roughed it in Oz in 2004.

Jordan, real name Kate Price, told the Daily Star Sunday: "This time they should do more challenges and make them tough."

"In the past they've had things like fake crocodiles around to scare people but they should use real ones."

Hubby Peter also backed producers' plans to make it the hardest series yet for the celebs to survive.

But he added: "We wish them all the best because we know what it is like."

NAMED VILLAINS FEAR GANGLAND HIT

AMAZED: Nigel Pivaro

Corrie's Terry in gun raid

FORMER Corrie star Nigel Pivaro is to be quizzed by police after a gun and ammunition were allegedly found during a raid at his home.

Pivaro, 46, who played bad boy Terry Duckworth in the ITV1 soap, was not there when police raided two flats in Salford, near Manchester.

It is said the officers were acting on a tip-off.

Pivaro, who has quit showbiz to pursue a career in journalism, said last night: "I'm shocked they have been round to my property."

"I am going to see my solicitor to see where to go next."

The Costa del Fright

by NEIL CHANDLER

BRITISH villains hiding in Spain are more frightened of being gunned down by gangland rivals than of being collared by police.

Last week British police named ten top crooks they believe are hiding on the Costa del Crime.

They created a special phone line for expats to inform them if they know where the villains are.

Now the wanted men fear the publicity will put them at higher risk of a gangland execution.

That was the fate of Jeremiah "Gorry" Parker, killed in a hail of bullets in August.

Boasted

He is exclusively pictured above carrying out a post office hold-up in Deptford, south London, in 1987 with accomplice "Scarface" Danny Roff. Two shots were fired in the air to terrify staff.

Roff, seen brandishing a hand gun, always boasted that he never went unarmed.

Trenchcoat-clad Parker can be seen ordering staff to hand over the takings just before Roff opens fire.

In the late 1980s, Parker and Roff were jailed for a string of hold-ups.

The money they got from these raids helped them start new lives on the Costa del Sol in the 1990s. Roff went on the run after overpowering his guard on a prison coach in Essex, just months into his 13-year jail term.

He fled to Spain where he was later joined by Parker, who had served part of his 15-year sentence.

Parker, also known as William Moy, was shot five times as he sat with his family in a Marbella café this summer.

Roff was killed in Bromley, Kent, in 1988 in a suspected revenge hit after he masterminded the murder in Spain of Great Train Robber Charlie Wilson. And that's what the top ten villains living on the Costa del Sol fear could happen to them.

A Costa crime source said: "The heat is on but it's not just the police to be scared of."

"Up-and-coming villains would love the chance to kill off one of this lot and become a big name in the criminal world."

"Some of these guys are going to come to a sticky end."

Drugs

The ten men highlighted by the Crimestoppers Costas campaign are murder and kidnap suspect Christopher More, murderer and robber James Hurley, prison escaper Clifford Hobbs, fraudster Dante Latreche, suspected fraudster Ronald Priestley, smuggler Ian White and suspected drugs smugglers Anthony Simmons, Terrence Shields, Mark Gottfried and Donald Haisman.

Hurley and Hobbs have both escaped British jails and Hurley is the only convicted killer of a policeman still on the run.

Three Brits and three Irish have been killed on the Costa this year as British criminals vie for supremacy in the Spanish and UK drugs trade.

Crimestoppers director Dave Cording said: "Callers can dial free and then be connected to our call centre in Surrey."

"This is about getting wanted criminals living in Spain back into the UK justice system."

The Crimestoppers campaign is part of the three-month police operation Captura, with a freephone number for expats with info on the wanted ten. The number is:

■ I SEE The Terminator has renewed his popularity in California of late. Arnold Schwarzenegger can never be President of the United States as he wasn't born there but, my word, I wish he could.

■ Isn't it TERRIFYING that Big Arnie is better suited to sitting in the White House with his finger on the button than the current President?

■ If someone had told me that 10 years ago, I'd have dismissed them as an oaf, Bush is the stupidest person I've ever seen – and I work with celebs.

MOTT

THE post-Q Awards party at the Met Bar was in coq sportif (it means "good"). Host Noel Gallagher was on top form and seeing him, Paul Weller, Kasabian, the Monkeys and Mani from Primal Scream dancing to Beatles tunes while I drunkenly waffled at Heidi Range and Dave Berry, was big for me. Sarah Harding was pictured trolleyed in the early hours, but it was actually Alex Turner who pushed the outside of the envelope furthest. Achieving that zombied state takes real commitment. I stopped at 10.30 and still had to lever my tongue from the roof of my mouth with a spoon the next morning.

SHOT

MR KNOW-IT-ALL

JOE

The day that I do a Diddy

(That's "do" as in "be like")

Picture: CLIVE POSTLETHWAITE

PETE Doherty, cocaine, contracts lost and won – all the words you normally associate with Kate Moss. "Mum" is one you don't hear enough. Here she is taking her daughter Lila Grace to see some fireworks. I could look at her like this all day. Business as usual tomorrow, I expect.

I CAN SEE YOUR ASS

If this girl were mine, I'd become enraged and demand she put some clothes on. Her outfit is so tight, she's essentially showing us what she looks like naked. I'd never heard of her before writing this, but I like her bum. So I've printed this picture and made it big, just for her. She's called Marissa Montgomery. She must be posh with that name, and probably rides horses. She also designs knickers for Leah Wood, Elizabeth Jagger and Peaches Geldorf. Her specialist scrubs are called Pussy Glamore. Mine are called Morris.

BECAUSE I operate with high levels of skill, I was guest of honour at rap bloke P Diddy's very exclusive post-MTV party.

Actually, I have lied openly there. I stood outside the Nasa club in Copenhagen in sub-zero temperatures – shrinking my manstaff to toddler-scale – and bundled my way in.

As Diddy arrived, surrounded by four tanks disguised as men, a riot kicked off and I surgically attached myself to his seven-stone female assistant, ensuring that I was dragged in too.

Shortly afterwards, the ever-cool Diddy told his security to stay in control and prevent a repeat of the "New York incident".

Nekkid

I had already met him twice on the trip (look to the right... there we are bonding in my picture) and been invited to the bash by the man himself. Twice.

So here's what a Diddy do is like...

Many women dressed as trolls, treading on my toes and being groped by celebrity entourages while champagne flowed like baby oil in a grumble flick. You had Pharrell Williams (small and nondescript), Nelly Furtado (attractive, if a little nasal with her mic work) and Timbaland (like a fat seal pup, but very courteous to women) performing all around the club.

Meanwhile, Diddy encouraged us all to drink and get "nekkid".

I drank, but the scrotal dwarfing was still unchecked and thus I stayed within my Alvin Kleins.

Men in suits then handed out numbers to the hottest women – who I suspect went back to an after-party and touched their toes – and a few Danish hookers booty-shook unconvincedly at the bar.

Cee-Lo, Dangermouse, Trevor Nelson and others kept a low profile and Justin Timberlake didn't come at all, opting instead to celebrate on Cameron Diaz in his hotel room.

I didn't go to Diddy's bash in London gaff Paper the next night, but I expect the same happened there.

Great if you're a hip hop icon, but unrewarding for non-rapping columnists.

Diddy does appear to have feeding issues, too.

At the London party, he spilt champagne down his suit.

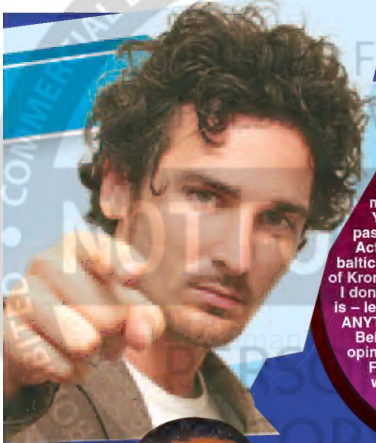

In Copenhagen, I noted he had a little bit of food stuck in his tooth.

Still, he was a great host – well-mannered and a gent.

He also delivered the best line of the trip when he told Juliette Lewis that rock music made him "feel sexy and want to bust all over myself".

An elegant and eloquent observation.

DO YOU THINK YOU KNOW SOMETHING I DON'T?

PARTY with Noel Gallagher, you say?
And his missus Sara MacDonald, Paul Weller, Kasabian, Arctic Monkeys plus others at the Q Awards, you say? Then go to Copenhagen and show P Diddy what partying means, you say?
Yes, I have done all of that in the past five days, I retort.
Actually, Copenhagen was bloody Baltic and everything cost thousands of Kronenborgs (local currency). I don't care what the exchange rate is - leaving a waiter a tip of 500 ANYTHINGS is painful.
Below are informations and opinions from my week.
For many, these are the written equivalent of full sex.

Charlotte cups her puppies

SHE brought this headline on herself. But I won't hear a word against Charlotte Church, who fills all her clothes nicely and has left her days of being a complete piss artist behind her. Now she's done that, it seems to be going well with her and Gavin, doesn't it?

Picture: WENN

Picture: MATRIX

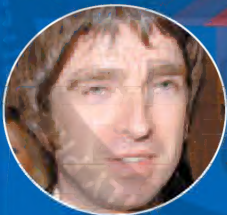

HERE is my astonishing and exclusive picture of Lily Allen orally benefiting the invisible man. Alright, she's actually coughing her lungs up at a gig in Portsmouth.
This is no doubt due to the large numbers of gaspers that she gets through every day.
I think she's back with her ex, who is my mate. I'll ask him at her show on Monday.

MOTT-O-METER

Who's hot and who's not

Noel Gallagher

SOUND bloke, friendly, no bullshit and not the tt he could justifiably be.

Jools Holland - for an amazing show on Friday with Winehouse, Legend, The Raconteurs and Muse. Top music.

Nelly Furtado - for trying to go to the MTV Awards naked in body paint but being banned.

Danielle Lloyd

I DON'T care when Teddy Sheringham first had you or if you're Miss Great Britain. Go away.

The singer at the Q Awards who suggested I'm "going through a gay phase". You know who you are.

The "first Bond review" writers. Stop spoiling it before the rest of us have seen it. We know it'll be quality.

THE shaven sack of an old man, or a piece of old Nando's chicken poking from a rubbish bag. I can't quite decide what Victoria Beckham's armpit looks more like. Cruel to be kind, woman - eat up... you used to be the fit one from the Spice Girls.

Picture: GREG BRENNAN

SAW Daniel Craig's publicist go spare when she thought Juliette Lewis was trying to make him play a guitar at MTV. "You're trying to make James Bond look silly," she said. Juliette just wanted him to sign it.

MOTT

RIHANNA came backstage after her performance and scared people. She looked like an old lady with a massive Spam, who's had lots of plastic surgery. Weirdly beautiful, but with the sex appeal of Jacko.

SHOT

THE Danish security folk were as intimidating as a tender lick from a puppy. "Smögensborg. Your pass does not allow you..." they said. "I don't recognise your authority," I replied.

Flamin' idiots get big rocket

SIX out of ten parents admit to boozing while hosting bonfire parties, according to a poll.

The shocking statistic was revealed as millions of Brits prepare to hold firework displays in their back gardens tonight.

Last year there were 475 injuries at private displays with children under 15 suffering 45% of all injuries.

Experts believe boozy mums and dads setting off fireworks and lighting bonfires play a major part. A Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents spokesman warned: "Parents often have their parties while the kids enjoy the fireworks."

by ANDY LEA

"This can be disastrous. Fireworks are explosives, not toys, and alcohol seriously affects people's judgment."

"You should never drink alcohol when setting off fireworks."

Last week, the Department of Trade and Industry issued a warning to pub landlords to keep drinkers away from pub firework displays.

But it's not just booze that poses dangers to parents and kids tonight.

Ignorance

The survey conducted on behalf of Burn Jel, a lotion for treating burns, showed a shocking level of ignorance of the Firework Code.

In the poll's Top Ten Firework Faux Pas was the statistic that 22% of parents think there is no harm in using petrol or paraffin to start bonfires.

Almost half have no idea sparklers shouldn't be held by under-fives and a third don't realise they must be put out in a bucket of sand or water.

A shocking one in five parents said they would panic if their child was seriously burned and they wouldn't know what to do.

And a separate survey by Norwich Union Insurance revealed Bonfire Night is the worst night of the year for burglaries.

Firework noise provides cover for thieves to sneak into homes while families are in their gardens.

TOP 10 FIREWORK FAUX PAS

- 59% of parents admit to drinking alcohol while letting off fireworks
- 58% admit to not checking fire for children or animals hiding
- 48% give sparklers to kids under five
- 33% would not cancel fireworks if it's windy
- 32% don't put used sparklers in sand or water
- 22% light their bonfire with petrol or paraffin
- 20% wouldn't know what to do if someone is burned
- 18% put foam-filled furniture or aerosols on fire
- 16% buy non-registered British Kitemark fireworks
- 10% would return to a firework if it didn't go off

BLOODY LOVELY:
Lena Headey as Spartan Queen Gorgo in 300

A BLOOD SPARTA-D MOVIE...

THE goriest-ever film is due to splash red across Britain's cinema screens next year.

300 is about a battle in ancient Greece 2,500 years ago and its blood-drenched scenes already have the censors reaching for their scissors.

Director Zach Snyder reckons the film, telling how 300 Spartans fought to the death to hold off a 260,000-man Persian army, may be barred to under 17s in the US unless they axe several gore-drenched scenes.

"On, there's absolutely too much blood," he grinned.

"One shot that's really startling is when the Spartans push a pile of bloody corpses the size of a three-storey building on to the enemy."

Scots hunk Gerard Butler stars as Spartan King Leonidas with English star Lena Headey as his Queen Gorgo.

CORR! REG IS BACK

Street aims for laughs

CORRIE legend Reg Holdsworth is ready to make a Rovers Return.

Show bosses have held talks with former favourite Ken Morley to return as "Randy Reg" with his ex-screen wife.

Sherrie Hewson, who played Reg's missus Maureen, will be back on screen with new love Bill Webster (Geoff Armitage) by the end of the year.

Soap chiefs want Reg to provide some much-needed comedy following the departure of butcher Fred Elliott, played by John Savident.

Ken, 63, became an instant favourite as scheming Bettabys supermarket boss Reg when he first appeared in 1989. And it was a huge shock to fans when he quit the show in October 1995.

Reg left Maureen heartbroken when he ran off to run Firman's Freezers in Lowestoft. He then met an heiress called Yvonne Bannister who had his baby.

Maureen agreed to a quickie divorce, getting the corner shop as part of her settlement.

Ken did briefly return as Reg in 1999 in Coronation Street After Hours – a six-part spin-off that reunited him with Bet Lynch, played by Julie Goodyear.

But now show bosses want him back for good.

Randy

A Street source said: "The departure of Fred Elliott leaves a large gap for a comic character."

"Before Fred appeared, Randy Reg was our comedy star."

"Maureen's return could help push Reg back into the soap with the added bonus of a rise in the ratings. The door has never been shut on him."

"Apart from Jack and Vera Duckworth, there are no truly comic characters these days."

Hinting at a possible return Ken, who is currently starring in hit touring play No Place Like Home, said last night: "I've never said never and I've made no secret of how much I enjoyed my years in Weatherfield."

LEGEND: Reg weds Maureen

Beauty gifts Paris a hubby

Picture: SPLASH

SECONDS OUT: Sexy Shanna at her divorce party last night and inset, Paris with Travis

THE beauty queen who punched Paris Hilton for "stealing" her husband said yesterday: "She's welcome to my sloppy seconds." Former Miss Universe Shanna Moakler, 31, and Paris, 25, face a court mediation hearing over their Los Angeles nightclub catfight earlier this month.

Paris claims Shanna, who held a divorce party in Las Vegas last night, punched her on the jaw while Shanna says she was pushed downstairs by Paris' boyfriend Stavros Niarchos. Shanna admits hurling abuse at Paris for getting "hot and heavy" with estranged hubby, Blink 182 drummer Travis Barker, but fumed: "There are some women like that. If she wants my sloppy seconds, she can have him."

SECRETS: Lorraine, left, and Siobhan shared a man without knowing

He's had me and me..

by DAVE JARVIS

THE Brit bodyguard engaged to pop beauty Anastacia led a double life with two different women for 13 years.

Muscular Wayne Newton, 39 – who dumped partner Lorraine Elston for the singer earlier this year – had also been enjoying an affair with besotted Siobhan Chadd, we can reveal.

He ditched both women after Anastacia, 33, was bowled over by him as he worked as her minder.

TWO-TIMER: Minder Wayne

Newton – who has two children, Corey, ten, and Max, three, by Lorraine, 44 – kept up a secret romance with Siobhan.

He invited her to top London hotels where he laid on champagne treatment in five-star suites.

And he got her tickets to concerts of stars he was minding including Simply Red and Toni Braxton.

Newton even met Siobhan's mum and her best friends.

When he was working abroad he kept in contact with romantic calls and Siobhan sent him birthday, Valentine and Christmas cards to his parents' address.

She didn't know about Lorraine and he never mentioned the kids.
